Subject: File No. S7-10-09 From: Lutz Monemariam June 8, 2009 SEC Adopted Accounting Resolutions On March 19, 2009, the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) issued Accounting Standards

Update (ASU) No. 2009-01 which amended its revenue recognition standard. Many major investment houses have expressed support for the FASB's new revenue recognition criteria. I believe the new guidance will help to protect shareholders who receive dividends from their investments. Even though I believe the new standard will bring more of the same, I do not share the same view of the "new" regulations as an investor. One of the most important factors that I take into account when purchasing an investment is the quality of the accounting and the ability of management to adequately manage the operations of the company. I believe that as long as management continues to use the correct accounting methods to report the company's financial results, then I have every reason to believe in the company's ability to perform and, as a result, to earn a profit and pay a dividend.

Update on the FASB Adopted Resolutions

The FASB has adopted three accounting revisions to revise, simplify, and modernize accounting for revenue recognition, performance measures, and financial statement presentation.

The FASB states:

- The objective of the updated revenue recognition standard is to present more of a current and operative statement by removing the past history of revenue recognition and being more consistent with other recent standards. • The updated revenue recognition standard has common themes with the rest of the current standard, including recognition based on when the goods or services are delivered to a customer, revenue recognition based on when goods or services are sold (consistent with the fair value option), revenue recognition timing to match the customer's recognition of revenue in accordance with the terms of the transactions, and a focus on matching the timing of revenue recognition to the timing of the customer's statement of operations.
